

Middle East Institute
Columbia University

&

Institute for Israel
and Jewish Studies

PRESENTS:
The Cairo Geniza
as a Source of Islamic Social History
WITH
Prof. Phillip Lieberman

The discovery of the Cairo Geniza in the late 19th century has brought to light thousands of documents which scholars have sought to use in describing the economic and social history of medieval Egypt and the Islamic world. However, the positionality of these documents, the vast majority of which emerged from the hands of the Jewish community, could present some problems for using them to draw a history of the Islamic world as a whole.

Prof. Lieberman is the Dorot Assistant Professor/Faculty Fellow in the Department of Hebrew and Judaic Studies at New York University, as well as an adjunct fellow at the Center for Advanced Judaic Studies at the University of Pennsylvania.

Thurs, Mar 5- 12:30-2 pm -- IAB 1118

Middle East Institute
Columbia University

&

Institute for Israel
and Jewish Studies

PRESENTS:
The Cairo Geniza
as a Source of Islamic Social History
WITH
Prof. Phillip Lieberman

The discovery of the Cairo Geniza in the late 19th century has brought to light thousands of documents which scholars have sought to use in describing the economic and social history of medieval Egypt and the Islamic world. However, the positionality of these documents, the vast majority of which emerged from the hands of the Jewish community, could present some problems for using them to draw a history of the Islamic world as a whole.

Prof. Lieberman is the Dorot Assistant Professor/Faculty Fellow in the Department of Hebrew and Judaic Studies at New York University, as well as an adjunct fellow at the Center for Advanced Judaic Studies at the University of Pennsylvania.

Thurs, Mar 5- 12:30-2 pm -- IAB 1118