THE PICKER CENTER FOR EXECUTIVE EDUCATION

The Picker Center for Executive Education was created in 1999 through a generous gift from the entrepreneur and former School of International and Public Affairs (SIPA) dean Harvey Picker.

Our mission is to provide graduate-level education for executives, leaders, policymakers, and innovators seeking to make the world a better place.

The Center is responsible for the Executive MPA (EMPA) and the Global Executive MPA programs, and for customized executive training initiatives. Our skills-based, world-class curriculum is designed to equip our graduates in fields such as international affairs, sustainability, and advanced management finance with the skills they need to improve the outcomes of the organizations these executives lead and manage.

Our executive training programs are customized to address the specific needs of senior executives from countries and corporations throughout the world. Each program is developed based on an agreement between the Center and the client. Our programs cover leadership management skills, public/private partnerships, crisis management and negotiation, communication and media relations, international trade, practices in economic development, and global and regional trends in the areas of finance, trade, income distribution, social policy, energy policy, and urban policy.

If you are interested in creating a new executive program with the Picker Center for Executive Education, please contact us at 212-854-5593.

The Center also provides customized, in-service executive training programs – here, on location and online – technical assistance, and research for public and nonprofit agencies seeking to improve current programs, develop new initiatives, or evaluate their performance.
